

Vipana Fact Sheet

Brief Synopsis

The word “Vipana” is derived from the Sanskrit, meaning “marketplace”. Vipana LLC was incorporated in early 2002 as a New Jersey limited liability company. The company employs 20 people worldwide through subsidiary companies in India and Hong Kong. During the first years of operation, Vipana provided data analysis services to the financial industry and initiated development of a VoIP platform that would form the core for future product development efforts in the telecom sector. In late 2003, the company setup a captive subsidiary in India and began offering IT consulting and software development services. Shortly thereafter, Vipana began forging relationships with strong technology partners and compiling a large list of technical resources. In 2004, Vipana tied up with Interlink Systems in Hong Kong to extend the range and depth of technical resources for servicing client projects. In 2006, development of the VoIP platform was substantially completed and further R&D was begun to commercialize the platform by way of introducing multiple value-added telephony applications into the market. The company now offers innovative productivity solution platforms for the retailing, publishing, telecom and real estate industries.
